When are the results typically available?

Availability of individual results varies by exam from immediately to 6 months after the exam administration. University averages are typically available in late fall for the previous fiscal year.

What type of information is sought?

Information relating to general knowledge in the major. In some cases, the tests provide subscores for particular areas of the major. The CLA+ exam provides information on critical thinking skills.

From whom are the results available?

Assessment and Testing Office and Department Offices.

To whom are the results regularly distributed?

Individual results are communicated to students and their department when available. University, College/School, and discipline averages are sent to the President, Provost, Deans, Assessment Committee, and selected administrators. University-wide results are also available through this Almanac.

Are the results available by department or discipline?

Yes.

Are the results comparable to data of other universities?

Usually, though not always (this depends on the test involved).

All Truman seniors are required to take exams or complete performance assessments in their majors. Faculty in each program select the most appropriate exam or assessment for their students with Department Chair, Dean and Provost approval. Currently a number of tests are used: Major Field Tests, Diagnostic of Undergraduate Chemistry Knowledge, Board of Certification, Health Education Systems Inc. exam, Certified Health Education Specialist Exam, ACSM Certified Exercise Physiologist exam, Praxis II exams (Art Content Knowledge and World Language Exams), Collegiate Learning Assessment Plus, National Latin and/or Greek Exams, and Area Concentration Achievement Tests. These tests are coordinated and mostly administered by the Assessment and Testing Office. The method of administration depends on the test administered, but most exams are computer-based.

Results of the senior exam are used by faculty to assess student performance in the major. Additionally, student performance University-wide on the senior tests is used as an indicator that the University is meeting its institutional goal of “recruiting, supporting, and graduating a well-prepared, highly qualified student body” as stated in the Truman State University Master Plan Update. Results are also reported to the Missouri Department of Higher Education (MDHE).

In order to be most useful as a measure of student achievement, students must give the tests their full attention and exert significant effort. Except for the exams tied to licensure or certification, courses, or departmental honors, the results matter more to the university than to individual students. This causes some concern that current scores may underestimate student ability. Several techniques for encouraging students to take the exams seriously are used by some departments. Departments such as Chemistry, Justice Systems, Communication, Exercise Science and Art include exam review in the curriculum. Several programs, like the sciences, require students who do not meet a minimum score to retake the test or an alternative assessment. Business includes a notation on the transcript for students who perform exceptionally or poorly. Other programs use the results as one consideration for determining departmental honors or as an assignment in the capstone or senior seminar course.

Generally, senior test results are reported as percentiles. At the individual student level, percentiles indicate what percent of all students nation-wide taking the test have scores at or below that of the particular student. At the University level, we are typically interested in the percent of students University-wide and by department and major who scored at or above the 50th and the 80th percentiles on the senior tests.

In fiscal year 2018, students took 1001 senior tests in the major which provide percentile scores. Traditionally, results of the senior tests by major and department are not reported University-wide. It can be reported, however, that the percent of students scoring at or above the 50th percentile on their senior tests university-wide decreased from 78.4% in FY 2017 to 76.8% in FY 2018. The percent of students scoring at or above the 80th percentile on their senior tests decreased from 43.0% in FY 2017 to 40.4% in FY 2018. The results from the past ten fiscal years are illustrated in the following graphs.
